And I also encourage manufacturers to consider and explore the possibility of the secondary packaging being made from recycled fibers. They would not just reduce, as is their top motivation, the cost of the packaging, but they would also be engaged in a responsible, a virtuous, an excellent, a thoughtful, a socially responsible activity. I encourage you to go out there and do it. I think a lot of manufacturers are going to do it. I think you will, too.

SUBSIDY TO THE COUNTRY David Johansen Dorinda (album released)

As the days roll on, it seems that the music of the 1970s is becoming more and more of a nostalgic memory. The music of the 1970s was a time of great experimentation and discovery, and it is a shame that it is now being looked upon as a relic of the past. One of the most interesting and innovative acts of the 1970s was David Johansen and Dorinda. Their music was a blend of country, rock, and folk, and it was a sound that was completely new. Their album, "Subsidy to the Country," is a collection of songs that showcase their unique sound. The album is a masterpiece of 1970s music, and it is a shame that it is not being given the recognition it deserves. The album is a must-listen for anyone who loves the music of the 1970s.
